CENTER for NURSING EDUCATION

If it makes sense to carpool with a few of your co-workers, take the initiative and organize one. Simple steps are often enough to put your budget on track. Studies show that families that live with a budget save more and are on sounder financial footing.

Make a plan to pay off your debts, particularly high interest credit cards. Using credit can quickly become a vicious cycle as interest payments eat up a bigger and bigger share of the household budget, and families charge living expenses to fill
