National Resource Center on Women and Retirement Planning

What is the Resource Center?
The Administration on Aging (AoA), in partnership with WISER, operates the National Resource Center on Women and Retirement Planning to provide user friendly financial education and retirement planning tools to women who have traditionally not had access to this type of information and who are most at-risk for poverty in old age. The Center educates women of all ages about planning for their future financial, health and long-term care needs and provides model programs, trainings and interventions for helping women build long-term financial security.

What does the Resource Center do?
The Resource Center reaches women and their families by enlisting the assistance of strategic public private coalitions as volunteer trainers. WISER’s “Aging Network Advisory Council,” which is composed of 21 organizations from across the country, promotes nationwide outreach on financial education and retirement planning.

What has the Resource Center accomplished?

Workshops: Since its inception in 1998, the Resource Center has conducted over 20,000 workshops and trainings providing financial and retirement planning information for women throughout the country.

Website: The Center/WISER’s website contains the important, basic information women need to know in categories ranging from money basics and investments, to Social Security and long-term care.

Publications: The Resource Center disseminates thousands of financial education materials every year and tailors them to the specific needs of hard to reach women.

The Resource Center creates a variety of consumer publications including fact sheets, booklets and a newsletter that explain in easy-to-understand language the complex issues surrounding Social Security, pensions and retirement plans, savings and investments, caregiving, divorce and widowhood, health and long-term care, and financial elder abuse.
